A guide for students entering the 6th through the 8th grades

Reading proficiency and comprehension is essential to meeting the goals and expectations of the Literature and Humanities classes. We want to encourage our students to be lifelong readers and learners. The literature assigned during the school year must take into account the rigour of the academic and extracurricular schedules.

Use the guidelines below to respond to your summer reading books.

You are required to read three (3) books over the summer. Two books must be chosen from the required list and the third can be chosen from the additional list for each grade level.

Writing Assignment Guidelines

The first writing assignment of the year will be a response paper over the summer reading. Listed below are the questions to use for writing your response paper, which will be due on the fifth (5th) day the class meets. These questions serve as a guide for the journey through the texts, as well as for class discussions. Students should write their responses as they read or immediately after they read the texts during the summer.

- Write a response paper for each book you read.
- Your response papers will be due at the beginning of the 5th class meeting.

Note: Do not use Cliff'snotes, Sparknotes, Shmoop, movies, abridged versions, or any other substitute/aid materials.

Response Paper Format: Each student will read three (3) books over the summer. There are four questions listed below to help you format the papers. Students should have an introduction and conclusion for each paper. Each question's response should be one paragraph. Open each paragraph with a topic sentence. Support the topic sentence with examples and analysis, and conclude the paragraph with a summary sentence. The paper will be a total of 6 paragraphs.

Questions:	Explanation:
What is the book about?	Write a brief summary of the book. Remember to begin your paragraph with a topic sentence (main idea of the paragraph). The next few sentences should include the main events of the story and the last sentence of your paragraph should be a concluding statement.
What were your connections between the text and your prior experience or knowledge?	Was there anything in the book that you read that you were familiar with already (life experiences, history class, other books, television, discussions with parents, etc.)? If not, what ideas were new to you (characters or fictional places, but personalities, experiences, the time period, etc.?)
To which character did you most strongly respond and why?	Did you like or dislike a particular character in the book? Explain your answer. Describe his/her personality. What was it about them that you admired or disliked? If you did not feel anything about the character, explain why you think he/she did not make an impression on you.
As you read the book, how did it change a view you previously had?	Describe how it revealed something new to you whether it is about life in general or about yourself. Did you change your mind about anything after you read the book? Explain. Did you learn anything new from reading the book? Explain. Did you just enjoy reading about a familiar subject? How was it already familiar to you?
